As part of our presentation at The Winter Show 2026, we are honored to offer a selection of works from the Sheila and Jan van der Marck Collection. Sheila and Jan were dear family friends for decades, and their close friendship with my parents and with me is something I will always treasure.

Jan van der Marck was a pioneering museum curator, director, and advocate for contemporary art whose career helped shape postwar exhibition practice in both Europe and the United States. Trained as an art historian in the Netherlands, he brought a distinctly international perspective to every institution he served, including the Walker Art Center, the Museum of Contemporary Art Chicago, the Hood Museum, the Miami Art Museum, and the Detroit Institute of Arts.

Throughout his career, van der Marck championed experimental, conceptually driven, and often controversial work at a time when many museums were hesitant to do so. He organized early exhibitions of Minimalism, Conceptual Art, and site-specific practices, and was an important supporter of artists such as Christo and Jeanne-Claude, collaborating closely with them on landmark projects including the wrapping of the Museum of Contemporary Art Chicago in 1969 and Surrounded Islands in Biscayne Bay in 1983. His exhibitions frequently questioned conventional boundaries between art and everyday life, and between object and environment.

We dedicate our participation in The Winter Show 2026 to the memory of Sheila and Jan van der Marck.
